Russia Seen Reaping Benefits From Increase in Oil Prices

By Theodore Shabad

While the leaders of the Western world have been struggliog against the impact of the higher cost of oil, the Soviet Union has welcomed the recent price in-creases by the cartel of producing countries on both economic and political grounds.

Establishment of close Saudi-Iranian cooperation has been euch a standard U.S. policy objective that a general tendency has developed to dismiss American urgings for closer links as mere rhetoric.

Cooperation was blocked ny Saudi suspicions of the purposes behind the Iranian military huildnp and by the Shah's attempts to force Saudi Arabia to go along with his campaign for still higher oil prices against Saudi wishes.

The Saudis have argued that it is pointiess to accumulate nuge sums of Western currencies if it only leads to the West's economic ruin. King Faisal of Saudi Arabia has consistently indicated his dismay over the Iranian insistence in December, 1973, on the tripling of oil prices by the OPEC. King Faisal indicated that the price rises were unwelcome at the time because they made it seem as if the Arab oil embargo, started during the October, 1973, Middle East war, was imposed for financial rather than political gain.

Meanwhile, King Faisal told Mr. Kissinger yesterday that Saudi Arabia would take up the effort to push down the price of oil in concert with other oilproducing nations.

Mr. Kissinger received that pledge following an audience with the King in Riyadh, Although Sheikh Yamani has spoken hefore of lowering oil prices, a senior U.S. official said that this was the first time the King personally had backed it up. King Faisal's position is ex-

> In an apparent effort to take advantage of the favorable price situation, the Russians have been accelerating work on expanded oil-export facilities such as pipelines and tanker-loading terminals at ports on the Black Sea and the Baltic Sea. One pipeline nearing completion will carry Siberian oll to the harbor of Novorossisk on the Black Sea.

Politically, Moscow has welcomed the quadrupling of oil prices because of what it perceives as a weakening of the grip of Western oil companies on Middle East resources. It has also pointed to the disarray in Western economies stemming from the sharply higher fuel costs as further evidence of weakness in the capitalist system.

Not Moch Leverage

Although eager to turn the world oil situation to their advantage, the Russians are not believed to have much direct political leverage with the principal oil-producing countries.

The Soviet Union is not a member of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries.

Moreover, most of the major producers, such as Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Iran and Venezuela, have been traditionally closer to the United States and other Western industrial countries than to the Soviet bloc. Egypt and Syria, where Soviet influence has been strongest, are not sig-nificant oil producers.

Soviet benefits from higher oil prices have been tempered by the fact that both the Soviet Union and its European allies have been importing increasing amounts of Middle East oil, presumably also at the higher prices.

Last year the Russians imported 14.7 million metric tons of oil mainly from Iraq, while ex-porting 118.3 million. Although Eastern Europe still gets most of its oil from the Soviet Union. Moscow has been urging its allies in recent years to look to the world market for additional sup-

The Soviet minister of the electric power industry, Pyotr Neporozhny, denied at news conferences during a visit to the United States last month that the Soviet Union was planning to take prompt advantage of the world price situation by sharply raising exports. He sair the de-velopment of new fields would take time.

But in the Soviet Union at the same time, the press was reporting rapid progress on two major projects that were expected to enhance the country's oil-export potential.

At the Latvian port of Ventspils, the Soviet Union's principal oil terminal on the Baltic Sea, a new deep-water oil-loading pier is scheduled to go into operation at the end of this year. The terminal, accommodating large tankers, cost 6 million rubles ($8 million) and is expected to raise export capacity at Vent-spils by 30 per cent. It is now about 15 million tons a year.

The other project is the 1.000mile pipeline from Kuibyshey, on the Volga, to the Black Sea port of Novorossisk, which handles 30 per cent of Soviet oil exports.

Mexico Urged By Leftists to Join Oil Cartel

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 14 (UFI)—A leftist political party today urged that Mexico not only join the Middle East oil cartel, but also help establish a separate Latin American cartel to protect Mexico's new oil find against U.S. "imperialism."

The Popular Socialist party, one of Mexico's four legal parties, said that in addition to joining OPEC, a "parallel Latin American organization of oilproducing nations should be created in defense of our interests against the aggressive position of imperialism.°

Niarchos Reports Suicide Attempt By Stepdaughter

PARIS, Oct. 14 (Reuters),-The death last week of Mrs. Tina Niarchos, wife of Greek shipping magnate Stavros Niarchos, followed a suicide attempt by her daughter. Christina Onessis, Mr. Niarchos's office said in a statement here today. Mrs. Niarchos died of an acute edema (accumulation of liquid) in the lung, the prosecutor's office announced here yesterday. The statement from Mr. Niarchos's office said that Miss Onassis, Mrs. Niarchos's daughter alleging that Mrs. Niarchos had attempted suicide in London.

The etatement continued: Cace her daughter was out of danger. These organizations are strongly opposed to any negotiations which recognize the existence of the State of Israel, which they are pledged to eliminate. They all are much smaller guerrilla organizations than el-Fatah, which Mr. Arafat heads in addition to his duties as leader of the PLO, the umbrella resistance group. But they command strong support among the younger fedayeen.

The Baghdad communiqué, carried by the official Iraqi News Agency, said that the militant grouping denounced all current efforts to settle the Arab-Israeli conflict as "imperialist, capitulationist and defeatist."

The announcement seemed to refute effectively the claim by Mr. Arzfat's PLO to be sole representative of the Palestinians, It follows published reports here that PFLP leader Habash was working to establish a Palestinian organization that would be a rival to Mr. Arafat's PLO. The annotingement may indeed mark the emergence of such a group. Lebanese officials were concerned that the rivalry could lead to a new ontbreak of fighting in the refugee camps and guerrilla bases in Lebanon.

PFLP official spokesman Abou Sbarif declared last week, "The PFLP is currently undertaking large-scale activity for the mobi-lization of the Palestinian masses." Asked if this could lead to armed clashes, he replied, "After deciding to withdraw from the PLO executive committee, the PFLP made allowances for all eventualities—and I emphasize all eventualities."

Reports reaching here from Aden, which Mr. Habash visited late last month before going to Baghdad, quoted him as planning to call a Palestinian congress in Baghdad to elect a new Palestinian national council, executive committee and central council, all currently controlled by the

Although the Baghdad commnniqué published yesterday gave no date for such a congress. Mr. Habash apparently has won the support of Iraqi Vice-Chairman Saddam Hussein for such a meeting, contrary to the expectations of Mr. Arafat and other Palestinian leaders here.

Birthrates Said to Drop in 72 of 82 Nations

By Sara Hansard

WASHINGTON, Oct. 14 (IHT). -The world's rate of population growth is declining, says a U.S. foreign aid official, because of the increased availability of hirth

Seventy-two of 82 countries with reliable population data showed a decrease in birthrates in the 1960s since the advent of oral contraceptives and other birth-control devices, according to a report by Dr. R. T. Ravenholt, the director of the Office of Population for the Agency for International Development. He attributed the main cause of the hirth decreases to expanded efforts by AID in birth-control programs in the developing countries. He cited statistics showing that countries with family-planing programs during the 1960s had significant birth decreases while countries without these programs did not.

Dr. Ravenholt contradicted John D. Rockefeller's stand at the World Population Conference in Bucharest last August that family-planning programs in Third World nations were not working and that people's eco-nomic status must be raised before population growth will begin to subside. There is no evidence of this myth that they don't want help. The availability of all birthcontrol methods (including contraceptives, abortions and sterilization) is the key to what they do," he continued. When the availability of hirth-control devices is the same, "the same pro-portion of women there as here will use contracertives," he said.

Examples of areas with strong family-planning programs and declining hirthrates he cited were Chile, Egypt, Hong Kong, South Korea, Réunion, Singapore and Countries without family-planning programs whose hirthrates either stayed the same or increased included Algeria, Brazil, Ghana, the Ivory Coast, Kuwait, Mexico, Peru, Venezuela and

The United States' birthrate also decreased in the 1960s. Dr. Ravenholt attributed this decrease to the "change in opportunity" for birth control and the legalization of abortions in some states. "The main source of exces: fertility here is teen-age pregnancies," he said. In 1973 the U.S. birthrate was 149 per 1,000 people, and in 1974 it is expected to be 14, he said. Dr. Ravenholt said that AID's family-planning programs rep-

its kind during recent years." Half the money for United Naprovided by AID, as well as bilateral assistance for India, Pakistan, Bangladesh, Korea, the Philippines, Indonesia, Tunisia and other countries.

The problem now, he said, is that funds are inadequate to supply contraceptives for every-one wanting them. He said the anti-abortion amendment to the Foreign Assistance Act pending in Congress now would limit these funds even more. In 1974 AID was allocated $112.5 million. Improved economic and health status are among benefits to be gained from a decreased world population, he said. Dr. Ravenholt also said he thinks that with continued family-planning assistance, the world birthrate could drop to 20 per 1,000 people by 1980, which would be an overall population growth of 1 per cent, The annual growth rate is presently 1.7 per The average birthrate among the world's 3.9 billion people is now 29 births per 1,000 persons. This means that this year the world's population is expected to increase by 68 million.

The President's challenge to farmers to grow more came at a time when many economists be-lieve that the great leap forward

has occurred, for a variety of Repeat Doubted

in U.S. farm productivity already

In their view, it is questionable whether new technology, new seed strains, more fertilizer, pesti-cides and irrigation projects could repeat the kind of dramatic gains of the last 30 years in the United States — a period when yields of such basic crops as corn qua-

There is also concern that the weather has been underestimated hy U.S. policymakers as a factor with profound impact on output. Some meteorologists say that there is evidence that the drought which damaged the corn crop in the Great Plains this summer may be a part of a cyclical period of bad weather.

Not all estimates are as entirely gloomy. Don Paarlberg, director of economics for the Agriculture Department, said in testimony before the subcommittee that the United States has the capacity to product 9.1 billion bushels of corn and 23 billion bushels of wheat hy 1985, compared with an esti-mated crop of 4.7 hillion and 1.7 billion bushels respectively this-

But even optimists agree that greater output and improved productivity will be far more expensive and tedious to achieve than in the past.

Most farmland that was held out of production by the government during the surplus years of the 1960s is being cultivated again, Since 1972, when U.S. grain reserves dwindled because of enormous foreign purchases, some 40 million idle acres have been put back into crops.

Enormous Investment

Only about 428 million of the country's 22 hillion acres of territory are used to grow crops. But economists say that the investment required to convert forests or borren or hilly pasturcland to larmland is enormous.
Mr. Paarlberg said that most promising irrigation projects to reclaim land are now completed and new ones will be costly.

According to Lester Brown, an economist with the private Overseas Development Council, water is in extremely short supply in many parts of the country. In rich wheat regions, farmers soon may have to compete for water with potential new producers of energy for the Project Independence program, he contends.

Because of these limitations, officials are counting mainly on increasing crop yields per acre to achieve the expanded production that President Ford wants. The House Agriculture subcommittee report spoke of n "throttling down" of research on livestock, fruits, vegetables, farm management, soil and land use. The report noted that there has been an inability to achieve technological breakthroughs recently in ker areas. Scientists still have not been able to devise any commercially feasible way of producing more than one call per cow a year.

Leading Farm Export

Also, scientists have not been able to achieve any dramatic rise in soybean yields, even though soybeans contain more protein than any other plant and are the country's leading farm export product.

Manpower shortages in the countryside and the high prices of fertilizer also are problems which could limit dramatic production increases in the future. There is no question of the United States running out of food. Normally, the country exports a quarter of its corn crop, two-thirds of its wheat crop, close to half its soybean crop and 60 per cent of its rice crop. The question is how to satisfy

U.S. consumers, commercial cus-tomers abroad and poor countries in need of cheap food to combat hunger—all in a period when the weather and limits on technology could both cause

President Ford has signed a law to abolish the Atomic Energy Commission and create the Energy Research and Development Administration, which could be the forerunner of a new cabinet

The legislation, signed in a Cabinet Room exremony Friday, brings under one roof the energy research activities of the AEC, the Department of the Interior. the Environmental Protection Agency and the National Science Foundation. The planned fiveyear budget for ERDA is more than $10 billion. Mr. Ford has 120 days in which

The recommendations, which came after the expenditure of about $2 million, were contained in a 78-page final report released in Washington over the weekend. The engineers did suggest a $2.8million safety program to protect visitors from unexpected rock

The study says that it would cost as much as $15 million to remove rock piles that have partly obscured the face of the huge American Falls.

The American Falls International Board also spurced a suggested $26-million remedial "faceifting" of the waterfall that would have anchored cracking rock on its surface.

The Joint Commission will seek public reaction to the report at hearings here next February. It will then prepare its own report to the two governments. Static and Unnatural

The board said: "It seems quite wrong to make the falls static and unnatural, like an artificial waterfall in a garden or a park, bowever grand the scale."

It also reported "stabilizing the American Falls means stopping the natural process of erosion. stop this process would be to deny future generations the anticipation and spectacle of continuing movement and change hrought about by geologic forces." The safety measures recommended included moving back existing tourist railings at Prospect Point on Goat Island, a warning system which would alert tourists to the danger of impending rock falls and realignment of footpaths and stabilization of the cliffs in the lower walking areas.

composed of American, West German and Canadian units. The other, on the northern flank, is the Second Allied Tactical Air Force, commanded by a Briton and composed of British, Dutch,

Belgian and West German units. Over the years, partly hecause of national differences, the two air forces have developed dif-ferent doctrines and operating procedures. The net result is that, with most of the planes on the southern flank, in tha event of war there would be procedural and command difficulties in shifting them to the northern flank, which has always been regarded as the likely point of attack hy the Soviet bloc.

Unified Control

The new command is to work out common operating procedures so that a pilot would have no difficulty sulfting from one flank to the other. But, more impor-tant, the relatively small com-mand of some 300 persons will provide unified control over the various allied air forces, which, as one air force general observed. "never really talk .o each other,"

Somewhat reluctantly, the British finally agreed that the new command would be headed t7 an American, Gen. John Vogt who is also commander of the Fourth Allied Tactical Air Force, The British were given the operations post, which they wanted. The deputy commander will be a German, and the other posts will rotate between the Belgians and the Dutch

Creation of the new command is the political ingredient in what air-force generals are heginning to describe as "a potential revolu-tion" in allied air power. The other ingredients are technological developments that air force officials believe will greatly enhance the effectiveness of allied air power in stopping an armored assault by Soviet-bloc forces.

Your London-Tokyo Executive Suite

JAL have been doing more for the business passenger than other airlines for a long time. So it's hardly surprising that they're the first airline to reserve a special compartment for businessmen. It's called the Tachibana Executive Cabin, a quiet, comfortable suite where you can travel with your colleagues and where you can catch up on business. With plenty of business journals and copies of important books on Japan, you can be well ahead of the competition when you arrive in Tokyo. The Tachibana' Executive Cabin is featured on two 747 flights a week to Tokyo. One from London and one from Paris/ Copenhagen. And you'll be glad to know that we'll usually be able to take short-notice reservations. Remember too, that this new service is only part of the JAL Executive Service, a comprehensive package that includes just about everything you need for a successful business trip-from secretarial service and office facilities in Tokyo, to chauffeurs, interpreters and guides. For fuller information, fill in the details below and mail this ad to JAL's London office or to your nearest like parade of top talent that cost $8 million a year to produce. and for which Mr. Sullivan was paid $164,000 a year. The show was dropped by the Columbia Procedeasting System in 1971, but he continued to be host on several specials a year.

He was not witty, he had no formal talents, he could not consciously entertain anyone. He bashful, clumsy, selfconscious, forgetful and tonguetied. And there were times when he was painfully eentimental.

The television critics panned him for those faults in the early years of his show. Sponsors were leery of him. The network pinched pennies on his budget to the point that he was using his own salary to buy talent.

But the public loved the show. Mr. Sullivan stuck to his job of introducing the acts, then getting out of the way. He was an excellent judge of entertainers. And he was so honestly ill-at-eas that viewers became affectionately sorry for him.

Born in Manhattan, he moved with his family to Port Chester, N.Y., where he attended high school.

After graduation, he worked for several newspapers before joining the New York Evening Graphic in 1927 as a sportswriter. In 1929, when Walter Winchell moved to the Dally Mirror, Mr. Sullivan was made the paper's Broadway columnist.

When the Graphic was suspended in 1932, Mr. Sullivan moved to the Daily News, where he remained. In recent years, his column-syndicated to newspapers throughout the country-had appeared twice a week.

Briefings in 5 Tongues There are five briefings, held more or less simultaneously, in five separate areas of the Vatican press office. The briefers, speaking English, French, Spanish, Italian or German, have been instructed that they may tell anything they hear or see in the synod, but may not give interpretation. In reporting on the small group essions in which the synod has been meeting lately, they may not even identify who said what. Since there are 12 synod groups most of the talks go unreported Following, however, is an ex-cerpt from a briefing the other

Opposite where the bishops sit in the modern audience hall is a set of lights that warn speakers when their time is running out, Speeches are limited to eight minutes each, Lights are marked "3 min," "2 min," "1 min," and

"Stop." Many bishops get up to speak with 25 minutes' worth of text, and hope for the best. As lights begin to flash, the tendency is to accelerate—which makes comprehension of accented Latin even more difficult

The synod secretarist recently installed a bell to reinforce the message of the lights. It goes off after five, six and seven minutes of each speech, and at eight minutes there is a double ring. The Vatican press office prepares a summary in Italian of each full session. This is trans-

Woman Heads Party

On Luxembourg Left LUXEMBOURG, Oct. 14 (AP). An unmarried woman has been elected president of Luxembourg's Socialist Workers party, it was announced today.

She is Lydie Schmidt, 35, a high school history teacher at Esch-sur-Alzette. The party made the biggest gains in the May 26 elections, advancing by five seats to 17 in the 59-seat parliament. It is allied in the government coalition with Premier Gaston Thorn's Liberal party, which has 14 seats.

press office omitted it. A hishop described the synod in these terms: "We're stripping away layer after layer of law and tradition and history, not knowing what we're looking for, and afraid to find it."

Just before the synod opened, the Pope observed his 77th birthday, with no hint that retirement was on his mind. But that has not inhibited speculation about the next pope,

R and Round Face Not claiming originality for the insight, the Most Rev. Denis Hurley, archbishop of Durban, South Africa, relayed a simple formula for predicting the papal succession: "A man with an 'R' is always succeeded by a man without an R' and with a thin Archbishop Hurley quickly ran down the list of the last century's Pontiffs, beginning with the fam-

retti [Pius IX], R, round face." Quickly dismissing the chances of Leon-Joseph Cardinal Suenens, archbishop of Brussels-Malines (no R, thin face), it suddenly struck Archbishop Hurley that Cardinal Alfrink, a progressive who is unpopular with the Roman Curia, has an R in his name and a round face.

Conspicuous outside the synod hall is Frances Lee McGillicuddy, immediate past president of St. Joan's International Alliance, Catholic laywomen who press for women's rights in the church. She also reports for the Brooklyn Tablet. When the synod opened she turned up with two buttons on her lapels and gradu-

Japanese Sign Pact On Thalidomide Issue

TOKYO, Oct. 14 (AP).-The families of a group of thalidomide rictims signed a compromise agreement yesterday under which the government and a pharmaceutical firm are to pay more than $20 million in compensation for the birth of deformed babies to users of the drug in Japan.

The dispute ended nine years after the plaintiffs filed a joint lawsuit against the Health and Welfare Ministry and Dal-Nippon Pharmaceutical Co. of Japan, which sold the German-made tranquilizer. The terms of tho agreement call for the defendants to pay a maximum of $133,333 for the most serious cases, $110,000 for less serious cases and $93,333 for the least serious. About 900 victims are believed still living in Japan.

LONDON, Oct. 14 (AP).-A storm blew up in Parliament today over the Labor government's cision to permit military cooperation with South Africa.

The Labor party and government many times have denounced South Africa's racial policies as unjust and discriminatory and have vowed to resist them. But a modification of the govern-ment's position lately has been detectable. Authorities ascribed this to Britain's need to safeguard its large overseas markets. Leading leftist followers of Mr. Wilson, nevertheless, teamed up with opposition Liberals to assail the development. Norman Atkinson, who speaks for a strong group of Labor activists. demanded a special meeting of party legislators to discuss this

Machine Guns Fired At Random Into Huts

PHNOM PENH, Oct. 14 (AP) ... About 100 Khmer Rouge insurgents invaded a hamlet 10 miles west of Phnom Penh today and killed 17 villagers, field reports said. Other rebels fired rockets at the capital's airport and radio station.

Villagers told newsmen that the guerrille hand infiltrated Ta Phem hamlet at midnight, fired machine guns at random and threw grenades into the thatched buts of sleeping villagers. They said nine villagers were wounded in addi-tion to the dead and many buts were burned. The raid apparently was in-teoded to provide cover for an-other insurgent team that fired 10 rockets at Pochentong airport and a nearby government radio communications center five miles from Phnom Penh. Neither was hit, hut seven civilians were reported wounded.

It was the first rocket attack

No Pact to Let A-Arms In, Japan Diet Told By Richard Halloran

TOKYO, Oct. 14 (NYT).—For-eign Minister Toshio Kimura came under vigorous attack in tha Diet (parliament) today as members of his own and opposition parties sought to determine whether the United States has brought controversial nuclear weapons into Japan.

Despite growing evidence that the United States has placed such weapons here, Mr. Kimura calmly asserted that "there is no written or verbal agreement" allowing the United States to bring nuclear arms into Japan without the permission of the Japanese government. Mr. Kimura also sald, "Ships that come into Japanese territory do not carry nuclear weapons." He added, "It is our government's basic stand that unless there is prior consultation, no nuclear weapons are brought into Japan." Yet a national security memorandom for circulation within the U.S. government in 1969 clearly stated that there was a "transit agreement" between Japan and the United States that permitted the United States to bring nuclear weapons ioto Japan temporarily, but not to deploy them here." U.S. Switches Stand

The United States, moreover, has switched its et and over whether the transit agreement exists. When reports about it first appeared in April, 1971, the State Department categorically denied that it existed.

News reports from Washington today, however, said the present State Department position was neither to confirm nor to deny the existence of the agreement. Further, crewmen of the aircraft carrier Midway, currently in the port of Yokosuka, down the

The opposition leftist parties, capitalizing on the "nuclear al-lergy" of the Japanese, have tried make a political issue of this whenever possible.

The current issue, which appears to be blowing up into a political storm, began when Rear Adm Gene Larocque, retired, testified before a congressional com-mittee in Washington that American warships did not unload their nuclear arms when they called at Japanese ports.

The Japanese government fears that the opposition may fan the issue enough to force the cancellation of President Ford's scheduled trip here on Nov. 18, much as anti-American riots forced the cancellation of a scheduled visit by President Eisenhower in 1960.

The Wake of Watergate

It is a curious fact that in tha wake of Watergate Congress and the American people are concentrating on the corruption that money can impart to politics, when in fact the root corruption of Watergate was one of power. But there were enough revelations of tha misuse of money in campaigns to provide a reasoned incentive for the sweeping reform bill which Congress has passed to make presidential elections a matter of public financing, and severely restricting private contributions in other

The case of the vice-presidential nomination of Nelson Rockefeller, however, and the articulate concern over his use of money, especially gifts and loans to political associates, is another matter. For averyona knew Mr. Rockefeller was very rich, throughout a political career that goes back through many campaigns, many elections as governor of New York, and several significant efforts to achieve the presidency. The same, differing only relatively, was troe of the Kennedys.

There was a considerabla degree of criticism of the fact that such men had an obvious advantage in entering politics, with their second or third generation wealth behind them, over the upwardly mobile young politician who had his family's cupboard to think about and who had to seek initial campaign revenues outside the family coffers. But on the whole, the voters tend to judge the Rockefellers and the Kennedys who sought public office on other grounds. Now, thanks to a number of factors, including the investigations permitted under the 25th Amendment, the Watergate syndrome and simple politics, the whole question of wealth and offica-sacking is under intense

No one charges Nelson Rockefeller with anything illegal, either with the possession of his money or tha use of it. In fact, a good deal of the present argument over his gifts begins to sound like the reduction to absurdity of the question of what a rich man is to do with his money. If he uses it solely for his own pleasures, he is a playboy; if he does not spend it all, he is penurious. If he gives it to worthy causes, through foundations, the foundations themselves are viewed with suspicion. And if he gives some to friends and fellow workers—is that human generosity, a contribution to public service, or an effort to exert power?

For money-and this goes back to Watergate—is power, and power has a potential peril to the community. But there is also a potential for good, and unless the rich are to he excluded from society and banished to expensive watering places to clip coupons in tha company of their own kind, the criterion must be not whether the power exists but how it is used. There are other alternatives of course, one of which the British Labor party has threatened—to tax them till the pips squeak. But that involves other risks, to incentive and to imaginative investment, and it is not one that exists in the United States today. Nelson Rockefeller has used his money to good purpose, in the community interest, and to blame him for that at this late day in a distinguished career performs no useful purpose.

Exit Mr. Jaworski

After nearly a year of exemplary performance as special Watergate prosecutor, Leon Jaworski is leaving office under conditions that border on desertion of duty. Too many strands of the legal tangle left by the Nixon presidency remain unraveled to justify Mr. Jaworski'a assertion that his task is largely finished now that the jury in the Watergate cover-up trial has been chosen and sequestered. Indeed, some of the statements made by the special prosecutor in his letter of resignation will contribute to making Watergate's final unraveling difficult, if not im-

He was appointed in the wake of the "Saturday Night Massacre" in circumstances requiring exceptional integrity, independence and legal professionalism. Mr. Jaworski supplied that and more. He took over a deeply shaken staff, kept it together and moved ahead almost without missing a step.

Under his leadership, major prosecutorial decisions were made which-with the large exception of permitting former Attorney General Richard G. Kleindienst to plead guilty to a misdemeanor—seemed judicious and appeared to serve the overriding interest tion the perpetrators of the most serious crimes of the Nixon administration. He persevered all the way to the Supreme Court in his quest for tapes and documents relating to the cover-up and thus was a major factor in terminating Mr. Nixon's presidency.

But Mr. Jaworski has been unwilling to challenge the validity of the Nixon pardon or nse the advantages of his office to the fullest in preparing for the Congress the complete report of Mr. Nixon's malfeasance in office. On his emphatic letter to Attorney General Saxbe declining to test the legality of the pardon. Mr. Jaworski struck a note of certitude on a very dubious proposition. It is not at all clear that his charter is not broad enough to test Mr. Ford's use of the pardoning power. It is at least arguable that the President's act was an unwarranted intrusion on the special prosecutor's authority and subject to legal challenge.

Mr. Jaworski's reluctance to report to Congress on a completed investigation of Mr. Nixon is an even more dubious position. It is quite clear that he is required to submit a final report to Congress and there appears to be no reason whatsoever-other than Mr. Jaworski'a reluctance to do so-to exclude from that report all of the details of the special prosecutor's investigations of Mr. Nixon's conduct.

Having taken those positions, Mr. Jaworski has created an atmosphere in which a decision by his successor to take either of those actions is bound to be highly controversial, And, in withdrawing at this stage of the investigation, Mr. Jaworski has made highly unlikely the selection of someone of a stature similar to his own or that of Archibald Cox, the original Watergate special prosecutor. Although Henry Ruth, Mr. Jaworski's deputy and preferred successor, is a man of ability and integrity, his appointment would not replace the moral authority which Mr. Jaworski built up during his tenure and which he squandered by his untimely resignation.

While Mr. Jaworski deserves the nation's thanks for the job he did, there can be no applause for the jobs he left undone or for the manner in which he failed to do them. The plain fact is that the job he was appointed to do is not yet done and he considerahly reduced the likelihood that it ever

Revival of the West

Yet, to define these problems as economic may he something of a misperception. For their solutions almost certainly lie much more in a fundamental restructuring of polities and institutions than in application of the traditional laws of economics.

Secretary of State Kissinger's fresh appraisal of the world's future prospects-in his long, philosophic interview with James Reston, focuses attention on the crucial need to shape "a new international structure" that recognizes the increasing interdependence of Western Europe, Japan and the United States. Otherwise, he believes. 'The Western civilization that we know is almost certain to disintegrate."

> During the so-called "Year of Europe," Kissinger's efforts to create a new Atlantic structure clashed with West Europe's new "national and regional sense of identity." But the frustration of that endeavor does not diminish the need for a united Europe operating in cooperation with the United States. Only by organizing the industrial nations in support of common policies and common action can the prohlems of the less developed countries be dealt with adequately and peace with the Communist world be made secure.

> For a generation, Americans have been sold international programs on the basis that they would end U.S. involvement; but the interdependence of the advanced countries has now reached a point that requires Americans to face the fact that their involvement in the world is a permanent affair.

WASHINGTON.—The nightmere which Henry Kissinger says fills him with a sense of inevitable tragedy is like sweet music to some of these watching the world from the Kremlin.

In his interview with James Reston of The New York Times, Kissinger spoke of the "almost certain disintegration of Western civilization, unless its member nations recognized their interdependence in today's economically troubled, inflation-ridden world. In a speech Leonid Brezhnev made at almost the same time, the Soviet leader diagnosed the "symptoms of the disease of capitalism of our fime"-gallop ing inflation, acute economic crisis, falling production and rising unemployment.

The crisis of Western democracy, he said, was "speeding up the disintegration of the political machinery of capitalist rule," Capitalism was finding that it was unable to answer the demands of time. To Brezhnev, all this was "unavoidable," because it stemmed from the "very Other nature of capitalism." Soviet spokesmen have filled in paints so broadly, and have looked forward happily to the final collapse of capitalism.

Old Dreams

For some time past, Brezhnev left all such talk to the hardliners who could not easily forget the old dreams of world revolution, such as Politburo members Mikhail Susloy and Boris Ponomarev. The Soviet model of the coming world crists has it that capitalism's economic troubles must cause it to attack the workers' living standards. The proletariat would retaliate, which would make the capitalist moneybags enlist the forces of Fascism In the confrontations that followed, either Communists or Fascists would prevail, which could lead to civil war and to international tensions which might result in wider wars.

Compare this with Kissinger's nightmare. His orderly mind has conceptualized the tragic progression, starting with a series of regional rivalries that would lead. first, to attempts by each region to maximize its own special advantages. This would lead "in-evitably" to tests of strength, which would aggravate the do-mestic crises of the countries involved. These, in turn, would bring about "authoritarian" regimes, whether Fascist or Communist he does not say, but presumably the first in some cases and the second in others.

The next stage would see international crises between these reconfrontations but even without such confrontations, Kissinger says, "systemic" crises similar to those of the 1920s and 1930s are bound to be repeated. This is not quite the order in which Moscow sees it happening, but it is all there. We are all Marx-

Different Marxists

But there are revolutionary Marxists, and evolutionary Marxists. Kissinger says that Communist state control is incom-patible with the present peeds of human organization, and that the Communist system will therefore change without any action by the United States-provided there is no foreign danger which would be invoked to impose regimentation.

The gap in the Kissinger interview, unavoidable in the give and take of question and answer, can be filled in from a speech just made by one of his top aides, Winston Lord, head of policy planning at the State Department. In a cogent, delicately balanced presentation, regrettably overshadowed by the publicity attending Klasinger's massive discourse, Lord has pulled together all the threads left dangling by his master. The long-term "con-ceptualization" for which Kissinger cannot now afford much time is provided by Lord's team. Are reports of the death of Communist doctrine, Lord asks, greatly exaggerated? We cannot

The Soviet Union, he says, must be prepared for "any turn" in world events, Such as, perhaps, the need to support the Communist side in a civil. war with Fascists, or to deter the United States from helping democratic regime threatened by Communist revolutionaries? The confrontations which both

Brezhuev and Kissinger foresee as a possible consequence of the West's crisis may lead them to press for arms limitation and reduction, but there are others, on both sides, who will find in these omens a powerful argument for the stepping up of the arms-

tary, as of the military elsewhere, is to build up ruthlessly the nation's strength against any possible future threat. The crisis of capitalism, a Soviet general wrote in February, is approaching a time when, "at any moment," situation may arise in some link of the capitalist system which will clear the way for funda-mental revolutionary transforma-

Unfinished Business of Watergate By Anthony Lewis

NEW YORK—There was a pic-ture in the paper the other day of Archibald Cox perched on one of the bridges over the River Cam, in Cambridge, England, where he is teaching this year. In the background were the lawns and glorious buildings that make Cambridge seem so serene, so detached from the troubles of the world. Looking at that scene, one wondered what the academics there make of this professor who brought down a president. It is a year since Cox said "no" to President Nixon's order that he stop trying to get any more White House tapes and documents. In doing so, he knew he would be dismissed as Watergate special prosecutor. He feared that the whole effort to reassert the supremacy of law in this country might fail. It did not, because his demonstration of character made the country understand what was at stake.

How long ago it all seems, that weekend in October, 1973. When a special prosecutor resigns, now, there is no earthquake. But Leon Jaworski's decision to leave is still an occasion to reflect on the speprosecutor's office and its unfinished business.

Haig's Call

A word first about Leon Jaworsky. He took the job under unfavorable circumstances. Because he was the Nixon administration? choice, some naturally suspected he would be soft. Nixon clearly hoped so. When Gen. Alexander Haig telephoned to offer the job, he told Jaworski that the country faced "a revolutionary situation." The Nixon White House thought Jaworski's function was to damp down the firestorm over the Cox

Jaworski was in fact no crusader. He was a cautious man, and deeply respectful of the presidency. He advised the Watergate grand jury not to indict Nixon. He was reluctant to prosecute Nixon after the resignation, and he was probably just as hapby to be relieved of the responsibility of decision by the pardon. But his natural conservatism made it all the more telling when Jaworski stood up for the law against White House maneuvers. as he so honorably did. His insistence on pressing the issue of the subpocuss for White House tapes to resolution in the Supreme Court played a crucial part in bringing on last summer's denouement. It is no wonder that Richard Nixon is reported to have trouble now in speaking the name Jaworski.

The main work of the special prosecutor's office—the investigation and prosecution of the many crimes of Watergate-is now well in hand. The pending investigations, notably those into Nixon's tax practices and his use of campaign money from Howard Hughes and others, should be concluded before long.

Inform the Public ...

The duty that remains to be. completed is informing the public. When the original charter was written for the special prosecutor, making reports to Congress and the public was pointedly listed as one of his responsibilities. Cox explained at the time that it was as important to know why someone was not prosecuted as to know that someone else was. We still need to know the reasons for some decisions why, for example, former Attorney General Kleindienst's lie was handled so gent-

Another six months or so should be enough to wind up the investigations and pending cases and write the final report: For that period it will be important to have a genuinely independent person in charge presumably Henry S. Rnth jr., who has been deputy to Cox and Jaworski Then it will be safe to wind up this extraordinary office and let the Justice Department handle any tag ends.

But there is one other part of the business that requires urgent attention. That is publication of the full record of Watergate. President Ford's pardon of Nixon cut short the ordinary legal process of bringing out the evidence. Whether Nixon will ever be subject to questioning in the cover-up trial is in doubt. The special prosecutor's office is concerned/about including in its report an accusatory section about. someone who is not going to be prosecuted.

For all those reasons it is important to consider the problem outside the prosecutorial framework. Then the solution is really quite straightforward. It is simply to publish all the papers and tape transcripts relevant to Watergate.

in Sen. Gaylord Nelson's bill, already passed by the Senate, to preserve the Nixon tapes and papers. It instructs the General Services Administrator to arrange access to the Nixon materials for number of purposes, the first of which is to "provide the public with the full tritih ... of the abuses of governmental power" known as Watergate.

We may forget that the few tapes we do know were picked by Cox and Jaworski almost in the dark, on the basis of dates. The rest must be sifted. There is no justification for a general fishing expedition in the Nixon files now; we are usually better off with a decent repose. But on Watergate the country will not be satisfied with less than all the evidence. It is up to Congress, not the special prosecutor, to point the way.

Sound Approach

A sound approach is indicated

The mechanism should be for the administrator to have an advisory panel go through the tapes, pick out all that is relevant to Watergate and not injurious to such other interests as fair trial, and publish it. Without comment _just the record.

Edward Heath began his care-

"I am amazed at the depth and new dimension of each Missoni collection," said Neil Fox of Neiman-Marcus No Rash Changes

The Missonis (husband Ottavio designs the textures and patterns while his wife Rosita decides on the shapes) are doing something that only great designers can do. They have established a style which they keep improving upon rather than making rash changes every season. For instance, they have kept last season's fishnet pattern which was an overwhelming success and they have translated it into summery fibers, They are also doing an encore of their flame stitch which they now use for their newest looking dress: a little tent with small bust and flering skirt.

They have also retained their salt - and - pepper stitch which they use for this season's Ford: a three-piece ensemble with flared skirt, long sweater and triangular shawl. But the most popular shape in the whole collection is the shift or chemise which the Missonis deliver in a wide range: patchwork print. geometrics with knif collar and cuffs, solid-color cotton jerseys and, prettiest of them all, a pointilliste print with delicate, flat flowers à la Poiret. The Missonis also have some pretty solid-color dresses, done in fluid synthetics and finely pleated from neck to hem. Their colors

Albini

The next best thing to the Missoni look in Milan were clothes by Walter Albini, a talented if unlucky designer who made a spectacular comeback. Albini was discovered seven years ago by Krizia and did several collections for Billy Balo, Cadette, Basile and Mister Fox. But he went bankrupt a couple of seasons ago when he tried to make it on his own. This time, back free-lancing, Albini deliver-ed a lovely collection for Trell

His approach to fashion these days is that one cannot invent anything new or go on reminis-cing. So he goes back to traditional clothes, closely related to Oriental folklore. His feeling is that these clothes have been honed down through centuries and that the basic shapes cannot be improved upon.

The question in Seidensticker's mind now, after five years of work on his translation, is what his new version will do to Lady Murasaki's reputation. "It's the great gamble," he said,

His new translation, of course, will not alter the fundamental Genji theme, a typically Japanese obsession with the passing of time and a melancholy awareness of the evanescence of things. Nor will Seidensticker's new Albini said he is going to do a couture collection next January but, and he is frank about it: It is strictly a publicity venture. "I don't believe in private clientele," he said, "I'll only do that to promote my name." Another collection worth mentioning was Cadette, whose fashion adviser is Karl Lagerfeld which accounts for the glorifled shirt story which Lagerfeld made very much his own last season. Muriel Grateau also turned out a fresh linen collection for Easile, with a clever combination light - knit cardigans over floating tent dresses or flared skirts. Krizia started off well with long cardigans over slim skirts, had second-act trouble but recovered toward the end with bloused dresses and stoles in Spanish shawl prints.

OPERA IN ITALY

Staging an All-Puccini Festival

By William Weaver

TREVISO, Italy, Oct. 14.— While most of Italy's major opera houses are in real trouble —some without a general manager, some without an ar-tistic director, all without money —the Teatro Comusale of Treviso has just begun its annual Autunno Musicale, one of the most intelligent, popular and well-organized seasons in the country.

Since this year marks the 50th anniversary of Puccini's death, the Comunale has naturally decided to commemorate the event; and they are carrying out their plan with boldness. Be tween now and Christmas the Treviso theater will present all of Puccini's operas, in chronological order, and in late December there will also be a performance of Puccini's youthful mass.

The first production of this Autumno Musicale combined the composer's two early operas, "Le Villi" and "Edgar." The first, shorter work was given a few years ago in Florence, but "Edgar" is a real rarity. Taken together, the two pieces make a fairly long evening, but they afford Puccini lovers a fascinating opportunity to sample the work of the composer when his gift, though already abundantly present, was not yet focused or directed. In "Le Villi" there are several tender, lyrical scenes that are pure Puccini; in "Edgar," such scenes are also present but there are other. long passages that suggest the artist was trying out less congenial paths. Though the influence of older composers-Puccini's teacher Ponchielli, his fellow-Lucchese Catalani-is evident, the operas have a vigor and charm all their own.

The much-criticized libretto of "Edgar" does indeed present a director with problems: the feckless hero, torn between the sensual Tigrana and the innocent Fidelia, succumbs to the former, repents, and-in a complex, symbolical self-indictment - regains the good girl, Beppe Menegatil's staging was fairly straightforward, if not particularly imaginative (he did a better job with the more linear "Le Villi"). Tigrana's is the most difficult role, the keystone to the work; the mezzo-soprano Giovanna Vighi made a brave stab, despite an untidy, sprawling vo.cc. Heanna Sinnone was a suitably melancholy Fidelia, and, in the title role, Luciano Saldari who sang well in both operas. In "Le Villi" the soprano Vilma franco Pastine produced the best singing of the evening. A nice story parallels that of "Giselle," a favorite Fracci role. Her romantic set by Anna Anri fram-ed "Le Villi," Maria Letizia Amadel designed more schematic, but equally effective sets for

OPERA IN LONDON

Good Old Blood and Thunder In Rare Verdi Work: 'Attila'

By Henry Pleasants

ONDON, Oct. 14 (DET).-Heard the very next right after the Coliseum premiere of Henze's "The Bassarids," with its perplexing intellectual preoccupations, the revival of Verdi's littleknown "Attila" at the Royal Festival Hall on Saturday was a welcome antidote of old-fashion-Italian blood-and-thunder

No intellectual conundrums Passion, patriotism, vengeance, and a measure of duplicity, admirable or villainous depending upon where one's sympathies lie—these are the stuff of early Verdian musical theater. and in their deployment and development he was in a class by himself

"Attila" is a better opera than its neglect would suggest. Within its conventions it achieves memorable moments. There are big choruses, rousing concerted numbers, arias and cabalettas, and vigorous, richly-scored orchestra. (on this occasion nothing less than the London Symphony, conducted with authority and fervor by Anton Guadagno). It can hardly be argued, however, that it is well suited to concert performance. Attila and his barbarian hordes cry out not only for the sack of Rome, but also to be seen as well as heard. Nor can the forceful utterances of Attila himself, even when delivered with the vocal splendor of the Met's Justino Diaz in an impressive London debut, have their properly elemental effect when issuing from the mouth of a basso cantante decorously attired in white the and tails.

Another American, the Texan baritone Ryan Edwards, over-came the sartorial handicap rather better in his one big scene at the beginning of Act II Earlier in the performance, and in an earlier appearance in this series of concert operas, his sumptuous voice has been plagued by erratic production. But here, in the

and the subsequent cabaletta. everything was in focus, and his ovation was solidly earned. He is a baritone to watch. The Odabella, substituting for Rita Hunter, was the Welsb soprano Anne Edwards, as she had been at a recent theater produc-tion of "Attila" in Barcelona. Aside from some gusty top notes and less than immaculate fioritura, hers was a compelling performance. The Foresto was Francisco Ortiz, also of the Barcelona cast, a promising tenor whose faulty intonation is probably a consequence of faulty vocal pro-

German Duchess Gets Rembrandt

BONN, Oct. 14 (Reuters),-A German duchess has won a six-year legal battle against the West German government for possession of a Rembrandt selfportrait worth about $1.3 million. Ownership of the painting, now in the Wallraf-Richartz Museum in Cologne, has been the subject of a legal dispute since the U.S. government handed it over to West Germany after World War II.

the 331-year-old painting disap-

Daimler-Bens of West Germany has signed a contract to sell Drag 10,000 Mercedes trucks over the next three years. Daimler board mem-ber Rolf Staelin said he could not confirm a report in Memo, the Middle East money magasine, that the deal was worth $1.03 billion. He also denied the magazine's report that the firm and the Baghdad government were negotiating a similar and possibly larger deal. Mr. Staelin says the deal for the 20-30-ton brucks was the largest of its kind between a motor vehicle company and a government.

Pilkington Defers Spending Program
Pilkington Brothers Ltd., the U.K. glass products firm, has decided to defer final commitment to its capital investment program of more than £150 million through the spring of 1977. Of the total, half is due to be spent in Britain and half abroad. Referring to Britain alone, Pilkington said that the board has decided that it is prudent to delay decisions on the commitment of money to its capital program until such time as essential changes in taxation and price control are made. The firm also says it is examining its capital spending projects outside Britain. The company says its investment plans had been hit by a higher rate of infla-tion than anticipated.

Yashica to Shut Plant, Cut Staff

Yashica, the troubled Japanese camera and office equipment maker, plans to close one of its two camera plants and reduce its total work force 40 per cent. The plant, built in 1968, can produce 15,000 cameras a month, but recent output was running at 10,000 units. The plant produces single lens reflex cameras. Under a plan being negotiated with its labor union, 900 of Yashica's 2,500-person work force would be dismissed through "voluntary retirement." The company plans to meet severance payments The company plans to meet severance payments by selling the closed plant for about 2 billion yen, officials said. Yashica attributed its moves to expectations of a lengthy depression in world camera markets. The company says it intends to proceed next spring with a previously announced plan to produce a new single lens reflex camera in an agreement with Carl Zeiss of West Germany. Officials also say Yashica plans to make a new, inexpensive camera at an affiliate in Hong Kong. an affiliate in Hong Kong.

Dow Chemical Drops Merger Plan

Dow Chemical has formally terminated its agreement to merge General Crude Oil Co. into Dow. Carl Gerstacker, Dow chairman, says his company gave notice of termination of the agreement made in August because of the delay in closing due to litigation resulting from the action of Glenmede Trust, controlling a majority of General Crude shares, in backing away from the merger. Glenmede, trustee of the Pew Me-motial Trust, owner of 63 per cent of General Crude, informed Dow on Sept. 4 that it was withdrawing from an agreement to sell its in-terest to Dow and instead had agreed to sell it to the International Paper Company. International Paper's offer was for $50 a share for General Crude common and $200 a share for preferred shares. This compared with the Dow offer of $45 for common and $180.56 for preferred. Dow says it is continuing its litigation against Glenmede for breach of contract and against International Paper for allegedly induring

Profit-Taking Cuts Stock Surge

NEW YORK, Oct. 14 (IHT).--Prices advanced strongly on the New York Stock Exchange today although they yielded ground to profit-takers toward the close.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 15.23 to 673.50 points after an advance of 55.54 points in the three previous sessions. It was ahead 27 points at its high

Advancing issues led losers by about 1,200 to 340, while volume totaled 19,77 million shares compared with 20.09 million Friday. Several brokerage houses noted continued heavy public participation in the current rally and said institutions had generally been inactive even during the gains

Confidence Level Of U.S. Public At 28-Year Low

ANN ARBOR, Mich. Oct. 14 (AP-DJ).—The University of Michigan's survey research center reported U.S. consumer confidence has hit essentially the lowest point in the 28-year history of its survey of consumer at-titudes. It mostly blamed "increased worries about a slowdown in the economy."

Economists George Katona and Jay Schmiedeskamp, wh. head the survey, said that "there isn't any reason to believe that the current decline is temporary."
Rather, they said, "experience suggests that the present combination of very deep consumer pessimism and decline in real incomes might make the consumer pessimism and decline in real incomes. comes might make for a severe prosperity with inflation control."

If short-term interest rates generally decline, "then a lot of capital would certainly flow back into bonds and shares," Mr. Ittensohn said. The strategy is still cautious,

The strategy is still cautious, however, he stressed. Only clients with "sufficient liquidity" are being advised to start acquiring selected U.S. shares, and those legally able to own gold are still advised that "larger portfolios should contain a gold rection" position." Mr. Ittensohn also indicated the bank prefers to set top limits on its U.S. purchases, so that it would not be acquiring shares at prices it deems unduly high and likely to come down egain scon. And when individual shares rise to "potentials" as-cribed to them by the bank, it will be prepared to sell them off and take its profit, he added. Recent rallying in U.S. shares still could be reversed easily. Mr. Ittensohn thinks, so that "you need to be much more flexible." Under prevailing conditions, "you have to follow up very, very closely—this is no more a time when you can in-

Agriculture: High on the list of the world's important industries.

And Tenneco has a part in it.

The most basic of human needs. And, a growing demand around the world. All of which points to an exciting, challenging future for farmers.

Tenneco ia part of that future. Not just in farming, for growing is only a part of our agricultural involvement, but as . packers and markaters of U.S. agricultural produce, and as a worldwide manufacturer of farm machinary.

Heggblade-Margulaas-Tenneco, our agricultural division, ia a laading markeler of fresh produce undar the Sun Giant brando name. Il serves as the marketing agent for over 2,000 independent U.S. growers. Through our marketing facilities and expertise, these farmars have gained access to naw and enlarged markets. At the sama tima, the consumer receives a premium product through such techniques as hydro-cooling, which permits certain fruits and vegetables to be picked at flavorful maturity and survive hipment without over-ripening.

Increased farm productivity calls for improved machines. Our JI Case tractor division builds farm machinery that does more work, yet provides more comfort and safaty for tha farmer.

Our line reaches from garden tractors to mld-sized David Brown tractors to giant 4-wheel drive Case machines. Manufactured and sold around tha world.

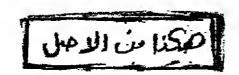

Whare damanda ara graat, so is the opportunity. And Tenneco is heavily involved in other areas of growing demand. Such as oil and gas, shipbuilding, pipelining, chemicals, packaging, auto Challenges all-but Tenneco has grown on challenges.

LOOK AT THE HARLEQUINS!

By Vladimir Nabokov. McGraw-Hill. 253 pp. $7.95.

Reviewed by Anatole Broyard

WHO but Vladimir Nabokov would invent a fictional novelist for the sole purpose of comparing him unfavorably with Vladimir Vadimovich? Vadim Vadimovich, the hero of "Look at the Harlequinsi" is a Russian emigre writer whose career "slyly" parallels his creator's. They diverge significantly only in the quality of their work.

Though Vadim is a celebrated aothor of considerable accomplishment, he is haunted by "a dream feeling that my life was the nonidentical twin, a parody, an inferior variant of another man's life . . . a demon, I felt, was forcing me to impersonate that other man, that other writer who was and would always be incomparably greater, beatther and crueler. . The Nabokov the world sees is Vadim: the real Nabokov is that ineffable "other." beyond the reach even of our

A charitable interpretation of "Look at the Harlequinsi" would suggest that the author is poking fun at himself, bot, in my opinion at least, neither the tone of this book nor anything else ever written by Nabokov encourages this view. Far more convincing is the impression that he is condescending to indulge in a few pleasantries on the subject of our short-sightedness. This is your pattry three-dimensional Na-bokov, he implies: Now I will give you a few hints, a clue or two. a fascinating trompe l'oril tease of a glimpse at the true Nabokov as only I can know him.

Nabokov is fond of instructing reviewers regarding his books: in this case, he goes further and revises the entire critical consensus concerning his work. He is not merely the famous artificer, wit and stylist his admirers consider him to be, but "incomparably greater." So great, in fact, that he passeth understanding. One of Vadim's characteristics is an inability to turn around in the street and retrace his steps—as in returning home, for example, after going to the tobacco store, on the corner. Instead, he feels that he must turn the street 180 degrees on the axis of his self. A more egocentric tic is difficult to imagine, and since we have been in-

Connoisseurs of squeezes have often noted that they have a protean quality: different lines of play by the declarer of the de-fense will often lead to a different squeeze ending. A striking example of this is the diagramed deal reported from a Reisinger Knockout Team match in the United States last May.

South opened one no-trump with a hand that many would regard as below the acceptable minimum and North took the bit between his teeth. When the Gerber convention revealed that South held two aces and two kings, a contract of seven spades seemed a fair gamble. North hoped that one of the kings w ''1 be in spades, and failing that, South might hold the queen and North Carolina State trailed, 21-6, entering the last quarter. When NC State finally got to within 21-20 with 3:36 remaining, coach Lou Holtz was of a mind to just kick for the tying extra point.

"But a couple of my assistant coaches wanted to go for it," Holtz said, "I looked at our squad and I knew the players weren't going to let the kicker out on the field." So Roland Hooks ran in for the two-point conversion and the 23-21 triumph over Virginia. In another last-quarter spectacular, Missouri scored three touchdowns in the last 11 1/2 minutes to upset Nebraska, 21-10. Kansas also came from behind in the late minutes of another Big Right game to edge Kansas

Celtics' Cowens Will Be Out Two Months of NBA Season

NEW YORK, Oct. 14 (NYT).-The Boston Celtics, who have lived in pro basketball's world of outstanding centers since the coming of Bill Russell in 1956, will learn during the next two months what it is like to play with a journeyman big man in the middle.

The National Basketball Association champions found out yesterday that the rugged, aggressive Davie Cowens had broken a bone behind the big toe of his right foot. The 6-foot-9-inch, 236-pound Cowens had X-rays taken yesterday in Boston after he reinjured the foot Tuesday night in the Celtics' 106-96 preseason loss to the Milwaukee Bucks at Madison Square Garden. The Bucks played without center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, who broke a bone in his hand and suffered an eye injury in a game last week. Jabbar will miss about eight regular-season games. The X-rays on Cowens also showed that the bone, although broken, remained in place. No cast wes spplied, but the foot was wrapped securely. He will undergo further examination by team doctors.

Boston has as centers on its roster Henry Finkel, Jim Ard and Bevron Jones. Finkel, a 7footer, has been in the NBA eight seasons. His best season scoring average was 11.6 points in 1967-68 He has backed up Cowens for the last four seasons

Cowens, who can run, shoot and rebound, sveraged 19 points a game, was the league's secondbest rebounder with a 15.7 average last season. He had a playoff average of 20.5 points and 13.3

Ard failed with the Nets of the American Basketball Association and with the Knicks and Philadelphia in training camp. Jones was a free agent.

Go-Go Tax Reform

with Washington is that it is a very suspicious town which keeps jumping to the wrong conclusions. The other morning friendly witnesses in the bar, a Arkansas's Rep. Wilbur Mills was few became hostile in Mills's autoinvolved in an altercation at the Tidal Basin with three women and another man. It was reported by bolice that ... Mills's nose was bleeding and he had scratches on his face. One of the women threw herself into the Tidal Basin and had to be rescued by the park police. She was Identified as an Argentine - born Buchwald go-go dancer.

J. 242.5.

The next morning everyone assumed that the powerful chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee was involved in some sort of hanky-panky. This couldn't be further from the truth. No matter how it looked in the newspapers and on television, Mills was doing the people's business. This is what hannened: Sunday night Mills decided to go to the Junkanoo nightelub to hold hearings on a tax-reform bill he was preparing to submit to the House. Several witnesses, including four or five go-go girls, testified that tax reform was absolutely essential if everyone in the United States were to get a fair shake. Mills remarked after each witness testified "Til drink to that."

As the evening wore on, more and more witnesses gave Mills input on what should be included in the tax-reform bill. Several testified against off-depletion allowances, others against real-estate shelters.

It was a lively hearing with people getting a lot of things off their chests. About 1 o'clock in the morning, Mills decided to adjourn

Nazi Art in Frankfurt

FRANKFURT, Oct. 14 (UPI). -An exhibition of Nazi-era art pieces, "Fine Arts in the Third Reich," was opened in a Frank-"Fine Arts in the Third furt gallery today. The show displays pictures and sculptures of women, workers, family life, industrial areas and the building of smerhichways.

WASHINGTON.—The trouble the meeting. He graciously offered nesses, three ladies and a gentleman, Although they had been mobile when he raised the question of the 5-per-cent income tax

> One of the go-go dancers said she was violently opposed to a surcharge on income taxes. Another woman said it was imperative that everyone in America bite the bullet.

Mills, who sat between the ladies, tried to be peacemaker. He pointed out that he was personally against an added tax on income that would affect the lower-middle classes. When he said this, the lady who was for biting the bullet punched him in the nose. Trying to recoup some of his dignity, the congressman added that although he was opposed to a surcharge on income taxes, he could see the reason for having one if it would stop

This angered the other woman, who started scratching his face Since both women were out of order, Mills ordered the man driving the car to stop by the Tidal Basin.

He tried to mediate the dispute, but to no avail. One of the women said Mills had no interest in tax reform and, while he talked a good game, he hadn't done anything about it for years. The other woman said that Mills was really a patey for big business and cited his contribution from the milk producers as an example of a conflict of Mills, who up until this moment had behaved like a perfect Southern gentleman, became angered and said, "I hold you both in contempt of Congress." "You're going to have to catch me first," one of the go-go one of the go-go dancers said. And with that she threw hersel into the waters of

The more eccentric the request, the better the Savoy seems to like it: Mrs. X needs a sufficient supply of bread crumbs when she arrives so that she can clean her kid gloves. Someone else demands that a platter of cucumber sandwiches and English pork sausage be waiting.

The Index at the Savoy

By Jeffrey Robinson

ONDON (IHT).-To start with the LONDON (IET).—To start with, the driveway at the Savoy is the only street in all of England where cars keep to the righthand side. Then of course there's the hotel's pedigree: created by Richard D'Oyly Carte (the original producer of the Gilbert and Sullivan operettas), put on the map by César Bitz, cuisme by Auguste Escoffier, an orchestra led by Johann Strauss, a floor show danced in by Anna Pavlova.

There are 400 bedrooms and 100 suites, and a staff of 1,500 caters to the guests day and night. There are 14 page boys, whose maximum height is five feet, and the kitchen uses 14,000 eggs a week.

Yet when it comes to facts, nothing in the Savoy can beat "the index." Here's where information on most guests who have stayed at the hotel is stored.
"There are over 120,000 cards on file," remarks one member of the staff. "For the most part the cards are filled with things like home address, business address, and what rooms the client has stayed in

But in some cases there are additional notes because some clients need special Extra Coathangers

Mrs. So-and-So doesn't like green bed Count Whoever must have his bed against the wall with a telephone next to it. One woman insists that there be two tea cosys waiting for her in her room while another specifically requires 16 extra coathangers in hers. "The index is our way of remembering what everyone wants," explains Beverly Griffin, the Savoy's general manager. believe that people get the hotels and restaurants they deserve. If in a world of disintegrating values they cannot any longer have perfection in their own home then it's up to us to keep the standards high when they stay here."

Several guests from the Middle East ask that their bed be turned to face Mecca. A notation on one card reminds the staff that Mrs. X needs a sufficient supply of bread crumbs when she arrives so that she can clean her kid gloves. Someone else must have guava jelly every morning with breakfast. Yet someone else demands that a platter of cucumber sandwiches and English pork sausage be waiting in his room the moment he gets there. The more eccentric the request, the better the Savoy seems to like it. A case in point, the idiosyncrasy of the American who refuses to live by European time. He keeps his watch set for Los Angeles, which is eight hours earlier.

Tummy Time

"He's on tummy time," says Mr. Griffin. "As long as he stays here though, a full course dinner is served him somewhere around 3 a.m. GMT. And why shouldn't any civilized man eat when he wants to d of when other people think he should?"

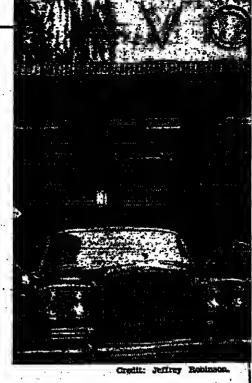

Of course, the index is confidential and not open to anyone outside the staff. The management was more than willing to make a list of such eccentricities as, "no pink flowers in Mrs. X's room because she threw them out the window the last time." And, "Countess X says she can't sleep unless she has a room with striped curtains." And, "Mr. X wants hot milk in his corn flakes." But the management would not tie names to any of the requests except in a few cases of well-known people, and even then, delicately.

"After all," came the explanation, "the index is one of the means we have of seeing that our guests are taken care of and certainly one of their needs is for privacy. We respect that, indeed." Mariene Dietrich demands the largest bed in the hotel. Maria Callas one night suddenly decided that the placement of the piano in her room, which was in exactly the same spot it had always been for her, was not satisfactory and had to be moved to the room of her concert partner, Giuseppe di Stefano. Then she even stipulated that only one of the assistant general managers could be trusted to touch the piano.

Champagne Magnate

Champagne magnate George Kessler once flooded the Savoy's courtyard so that his guests could be served dinner aboard gon-dolas. Henry Irving lived permanently at the Savoy and James McNeil Whistler, who seemed constantly to be feuding with Irving, lived down the hall. They were forever ignoring each other in the elevator, and the staff was fully briefed to see that confrontations were avoided.

Names don't necessarily matter when the index has such stories to tell as the one about the time someone came in with a net leopard. As animals are "not generally accepted," the leopard was politicly escented outside. Or the story of the shelkhs who sometimes arrive with an entourage, inchiding wives and cooks and, notes the index their own carpets.

The most precise guest in the hotel's history is named by the management, almost without hesitation. They say the prize has to go to Noel Coward.

Like many people who deal or have dealt regularly with the Savoy, he left clothes there so he'd never need a suitcase. (One guest, according to the index, deposits her in sable in ice storage at the hotel all year around, while another has left nine suits and a duffle coat there.) Yet Coward was hardly that simple.

Besides, the clothes, says Mr. Griffin "he wanted five pillows and a large bed. Then he insisted that the tables the chairs, his pills and even his water glass all be placed in exactly the same way every time he stayed here. It took some doing but we finally worked out a system. When we got everything exactly the way he liked we had the room photographed and filed the picture in the index. From then on, we simply followed the index to the minutest detail."
